Mr Benniman approached the programme in a professional manner. His attendance and punctuality were good. He participated well in group work and class discussion and his assignments were of a good standard.

He undertook his teaching practice in an inner London College of F.E. where he taught on a range of ESOL courses. His lessons were always well prepared, he managed the classroom environment effectively and he was sensitive to the individual needs of his students. He used a range of teaching methods which were motivating for the students and effective in engaging them actively, so that they developed good communication skills.

He was required to document the teaching practice in a professional portfolio, which was generally well presented and demonstrated a very clear understanding of theory underpinning practice.

He has now satisfactorily completed all of the programme requirements.

'All students are provided with a transcript of assessment of results at the point of award or progression'.
